NOTE about the pricing and sizes: The sizes quoted in inches beside each name refer to the PRINT AREA not the size of the sheet on which the images are printed. The size of the sheet varies, and to some extent the prices reflect the size of the sheet – for instance, the series of carpet-related images were all printed on sheets of 11"x16" whereas BULL, which appears to be the same size as the various members of the CARPET family, was printed on sheets of 7.5"x15".

Availability is another factor: I have slightly raised the prices of prints which are coming to the ends of their editions.

The amount of effort required to pull each impression is an important factor. Whenever, for instance, there's more than one colour on a print, it means that each impression required the print-maker to take that much longer preparing the plate between impressions. It is tedious and time-consuming work, which I am extremely thankful I didn't have to do – there was a skilled young printer's assistant at the Atelier where I worked and he printed the editions. Editioning is generally very expensive so it was just my good luck that I was working at a highly affordable studio. Sadly, there were so few artists willing to avail of the facilities, that it closed down in early 2004.
